

All the Time

At a baseball game, EIN and NEWT sit far apart from each other. EIN amusingly and NEWT dreadfully stare at an unseen jumbotron.

EIN: (lightheartedly puckers up) Are we related?

NEWT: Don't make light of this.

EIN: Just wanted to know the energy of these stands.

NEWT: Eye to eye, we don't massively see squarely.

EIN: It is in the beholder.

NEWT: (points to the unseen field) Ein... What about Maxwell?

EIN: Newt... Maxwell is still in the equation. In fact, the.

A baseball lands between EIN and NEWT.

NEWT: A dent in the fabric of space-time, they will say.

EIN and NEWT lunge for the baseball.

EIN: You sure lightened up. Are we too/two related?

NEWT: A constant. We get that all the time.

Fin.
